

CIO Project Plans Overview

The following tables list the CIO Project Plans for this supplemental NOFO, which is for Year 1 of CDC-RFA-PW24-0080, by Population of Focus Category. As a reminder, any activities involving information collection (i.e., surveys, questionnaires, etc.) are subject to OMB/PRA requirements and may require the CDC to coordinate an OMB Information Collection Clearance. Recipients and funding CIO should engage in OMB/PRA discussions shortly after Notices of Award are issued to allow time to submit applicable paperwork.

Applicants are eligible to submit applications for CIO Project Plans that match the Population of Focus Category and Population of Focus Description for which they received initial funding in FY24.

Individual awards will vary depending on the activities and approximate funding available for each CIO Project Plan. The approximate amount available for a particular project is listed for each project title.

Modified CIO Project Plans are highlighted in yellow. CIO Project Plans removed from the supplement are in red text.

			National partner organizations and public health systems serving heart disease and HVD at-risk populations through education and awareness activities on heart disease and HVD risks, signs and symptoms, and how to engage with healthcare. These heart disease and/or HVD-focused organizations may engage their priority audiences through their web site and social media, planned publicity events, conferences, and other partnership opportunities. These organizations may be smaller with limited funding and may benefit from increased national visibility on the subject as well as being able to access and leverage available messages, materials, PSAs, advertising and other communication tools produced through this project.
Project Plan - 0235	Heart Disease and Heart Valve Disease - National Communication Campaign Capacity	Category C: Public Health System Components		$ 800,000

			Healthcare Professionals (HCP) across the healthcare team (e.g., physicians, nurses, physician's assistants) or part of public health systems reaching populations at risk for or diagnosed with HVD. These HCPs may work in community health centers, federally qualified health centers, other public clinics, private practices, or hospitals. They will most likely be primary care physicians and their supporting healthcare team members. Where the HCPs own experience with HVD is limited or seems infrequent, this work would build HCPs individual capacity to educate, detect and refer patients with these conditions. The populations served by these HCPs may be diverse in age, race, geography, income, and language, as HVD can be congenital or result after structural damage to the heart. Capacity building assistance efforts will likely benefit from collaborating with healthcare professional organizations familiar with heart disease broadly, and HVD specifically.
