When applying for the maximum award amount, should each participating center budget an equal share of the available funding after the primary recipient's allocation?

The NOFO has an equal funding distribution requirement. It requires that, after the primary recipient budgets up to $500,000 for administrative and management responsibilities, the remaining cooperative agreement funds be distributed equally among the participating centers, including the primary recipient.

The budgets should reflect the equal allocation available to each participating center, consistent with the NOFO requirement.

For example, if you are requesting the maximum $11.25 million and if your application includes 5 centers, after the $500,000 allocation for the primary recipient, each center would request an equal $2.15 million for each year of the project. A complete budget narrative for each center subaward would accompany this request.
